In the sentence I have a bibliography page which I'd like to split in/into sections which would you rather use: split in or split into? Why?

This Temank solar inverter delivers 10000 watt of power

With split phase (120V/240V) and single phase (120V) outputs, it supports a wide range of appliances and systems. The included Wi-Fi module enables remote monitoring and control via a mobile app,

Ideal for home backup systems and off-grid cabins, it can reliably power large split-phase appliances such as air conditioners, water

What should be used in below sentence: "split" or "split up", and why? We need to split up the background image of the website into two parts.

This package includes two 48V 100Ah LiFePO4 integrated communication

Does the "in" imply multiplication, in which case split in half is correct, or is it division? It sounds like the latter to me, but I've heard it used both ways.

High-capacity inverters over 10,000 watts designed for large-scale solar and off-grid systems. Featuring hybrid, split-phase, and pure sine wave technology for reliable, efficient energy

Split infinitives involve the to-infinitive specifically. The "to" not a "preposition"; it is a infinitive marker. Lastly, I found your arguments about "wanna" & "gonna" unconvincing and irrelevant because these

In those situations, the court's orders force the parties to reveal information--how much discovery was really needed and what the parties were willing to settle for--that the court couldn't
